

who's talking?
assembly point exhibition, south bank, australia
6 may – 26 june 2020

Created for a group exhibition titled Am I Hearing an Echo? with Victoria Jost and Elnaz Nourizadeh.

An assemblage of raw clay objects, raw clay from a local building site, cutting from a geranium plant, branches from fallen gum trees and pieces from disassembled domestic wooden chairs and various string, fabric and wool fibres. T references:

David Nash (1970s) Ladder
Nash's work can also be seen as an ephemeral expression of nature's ongoing processes.

Mark Dion - well-known for artworks that question how we experience, study, display and think about the natural world.

Carl Jung Understanding Yourself
<https://exploringyourmind.com/carl-jung-psychology-and-alchemy/>
There are two kinds of alchemy. One strives to get to know the cosmos as a whole and recreate it. It's the precursor of modern natural science. The other alchemy focuses on the possibility of a transformation that will lead you to be your true self.